Last Week: Students in Mrs. Hieber's Marketing class are currently learning about E-tailing (electronic retailing) which refers to selling goods and services online. Students Hannah Lyons and Elena Gallardo-Torres came up with their own business ideas, which wasn't hard for these two young ladies as they are both aspiring entrepreneurs! They then were tasked with creating a multi-page website using Google Sites to bring their business idea to life! Students created their own logo, motto, product packaging, and even pricing. In addition to their site, they had to put together a research report that included researching their competition and incorporating the principles of free enterprise (ownership, risk, and profit). They were graded on creativity, functionality, and ease of navigation of their sites. Additionally, they were graded on their reports and each discussed how they would make a profit and still handle expenses (salaries, costs of goods sold, insurance, marketing, etc.) Finally, they discussed the risks they may face (financial losses, legal expenses, etc.) and how to mitigate those risks. Both students knocked this project out of the park! Great job Hannah and Elena!
